The "Cheap Johns."

It does a poor man a deal of good to tramp up and down the Bowery and Chatham street and see what splendid bargains are offered under the shadow of those gilt balls. Hanging in a conspicuous place in a well-filled window you will discover a diamond pin with a center stone as big as a filbert, and on the card is written: "A little off-color—only $35." "Gracious! but how it saves a man's hair climb up to read the figures, and to think of bursting in on an evening with that pin throwing out ten thousand scintillations a minute! "Off-color" is pretty good, but "all glass" would be more appropriate. The next window will reveal "this solid seven-pearl ring only eight dollars!" A young man with that ring on his finger would "masb" a country town in just fifteen minutes, and fifteen minutes after that he might discover that the seven pearls were worth a cent apiece, and the ring only worth a cent apiece. Many of the regular jewelers are also up to tricks. "Can't be told from real diamonds—only three dollars," is the legend borne by hundreds of cards on which are displayed sets of ear-drops, and "Worn by a lord at Saratoga for a genuine stone," is the story told of many a "diamond" ring.

"GROSSLY MISLED." One of the sights of Chatham street are the dealers in second-hand clothing and furniture, and there is one place in particular where almost every article one can think of or ask for will be promptly handed out. On the same counter were swords, pistols, sickles, coffee-mills, jack-knives, lamps, nut-crackers, button-holes, candle-molds, grindstones, egg-beaters, riding-whips, dog-chains, horse-collars, hymn-books, lamp-wicks, paper collars, knitting-needles, fire-fenders, and fifty other different articles.

The second-hand clothiers let no chance pass to drive a bargain. They look at every man with an eye to buy or to sell. "I got off the Elevated Road one day at Chatham Square and walked down the street just behind a gentleman from Pennsylvania, who counts his dollars by the million. He had on as fine a suit of clothes as money can buy, and his general bearing was that of a perfect gentleman. Yet, as he passed one of these clothing stores, the man at the door pointed to an old dress coat which had been patched and dyed, and boldly remarked: "I want to call your attention to this coat, which is a bargain at four dollars!"

The millionaire halted and gave the fellow one awful look, but it didn't affect him a bit, for as I came up he gave me dead away on a pair of checked pants at "only two dollars," and long enough in the legs for a man eight feet high.

The second-hand furniture dealers have even more cheek. They let no one pass. A man with a satchel in each hand, just ready to start for his home a thousand miles away, is earnestly invited to "step in and examine this parlor suite, at only forty dollars." I finally went in this way so often that I finally went in one day to see what the furniture really was, and what further the dealer would say.

"Most people would take this for new furniture," he confidentially whispered, as he pointed to a sofa and six chairs upholstered in green and sadly faded and worn, "but I won't try to deceive a man like you. To tell the truth they were sent down here from a Fifth Avenue parlor to be sold on the street. Sad case, that! Husband died suddenly—property all incumbered—widow left without means—obliged to sell off her furniture, and so forth."

"Is that so?"

"Pon my sacred honor. How much do you suppose I gave her for this suite?"

"Seven dollars."

The look he gave me I shall ever remember, but he swallowed the lump in his throat and continued:

"Yes—ah! I'm a joker myself. But, seriously, I gave forty-two dollars for this very suite, which I am now offering at even forty. I am not hard-hearted enough for this business, and I'm going to quit it. When I got up there the clerk and took on so that I gave ten dollars more than I ought to. I shall lose two dollars by the operation, and it serves me right. Now, then, what do you say?"

I said I lived in the Sandwich Islands, was short of funds and had neither wife nor home, but he lowered the price to thirty-five dollars, then to thirty dollars, and ran half a block after me to say that he could take twenty-five dollars if I'd agree to keep it a profound secret as long as I live.

THE MAN IN A FIT. Other sharp-witted fellows are to be found on this same Chatham street, which, at certain hours of the day, is more crowded than Broadway. One day, as I jogged along, I noticed a stiff-legged young man with an unmistakable agricultural cut to his hair. He was carrying a satchel in one hand and a fresh-cut hazel stick in the other, and a parrot-like squawking sound came from his mouth. He was looking at his broad back and wondering what had brought him to town, when three sharp-looking fellows came along and piped him off in a second. One of them approached the window and looked in, and all of a sudden fell down in a fit. The other two rushed up and began rubbing his hands, and the man with the satchel was asked to assist. He willingly complied. A small crowd gathered, but in two or three minutes the patient opened his eyes, got up, and presently walked away. I asked the young man if he had lost anything. He gave a sudden start, went down into his pocket, and his eyes were as big as saucers as he yelled out: "I've had my pocket picked!"

So he had. Two or three of us were trying to console him, when all at once his face brightened and he whispered: "Yew-reek! All they got, come to think of it, was my old wallet and 'levea cents, for I remember of putting all my bills in this 'ere left boot 'fore I got off the cars!"—M. Quail, in Detroit Free Press.

KING THEBRAW, of Burmah, who is reported to have caused 700 men, women and children to be buried alive as a sacrifice for his restoration to health, is but twenty years old. Selected over his elder brothers to rule, he paid the ministers who had advanced him by imprisoning them. Instead of these advisers of his father, he surrounded himself with men or boys of his own age and tastes, and the palace became the scene of orgies conducted absolutely without restraint. An article lately published regarding him says: "Another of Thebraw's acts, immediately after his accession, was to secure himself against palace plots by the simple process of killing all his relatives. A better idea of what this means can be gained by considering that the gay old monarch had fifty-three wives and 110 children, of whom thirty-seven wives and fifty-nine children survived him. It is impossible to say how many of these brothers, sisters and stepmothers—so to speak—were killed, but eighty is a fair compromise estimate. It must not be imagined that they were disposed of with any sentimental tenderness. At first the victims were led from their cells in twos and threes to shakko to the King; then their heads were tied to their respective pairs of ankles, and blows with a heavy club on the backs of their necks ended their misery. But this soon proved too mild a spectacle for the fiendish malignity of Thebraw. One of his elder brothers confessed, and was flogged to death. Another, who had looked upon foreigners as the dirt beneath his feet, and as utterly unworthy to crawl between heaven and earth, was taunted and driven to madness before receiving a half-fatal blow, and his writhing body was then thrown into the gigantic trench dug to receive the dead. A former Governor of Rangoon had his nose and mouth filled with gunpowder, a match was applied, and he was stifled by the succeeding bodies. One young girl of sixteen was pitched into the same heaving grave after having suffered every outrage which could be devised by eight soldiers of the guard. The massacre was carried on in this leisurely fashion until Thebraw and the executioners wearied of the sport; then the women were simply battered over the head, and the children were swung against the palace walls. At last the victims were all killed, and the revolting spectacle was over, but Thebraw's plan—one not unusual in Burmah—was not successful, for the reason that at least three of his blood escaped, and one of them will probably succeed him. The area of Burmah (a country in the southeast of Asia, between India and China, and south of Tibet) is 192,000 square miles, and its population is 3,500,000. The revenue of the King is £800,000, with perquisites enough to make out the oven million."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

ANOTHER RALLY.

Stephen A. Douglas, Jr., and R. S. Tutthill, of Chicago, to speak Monday night.

There is to be another Republican mass meeting, at which Stephen A. Douglas, Jr., and R. S. Tutthill, of Chicago, will speak. Both are known here as able speakers and the mere announcement should be enough to cause the house to be crowded. The place is Lippin's hall; the time, Monday evening. The Bower City Band will furnish the music. Everybody invited.

BRIEF NEWS.

—Temperance night.

—Stop fast driving across the bridge.

—John Sheely was so drunk yesterday, that he had to be taken to the jail for keeping. He was too sick to-day to appear in the Police Court.

—The Democratic nominee for Governor of Michigan, is the father of Leroy T. Holloway, who is connected with John Griffith's hardware establishment.

—Make your arrangements of business and home so as to be sure and hear Colonel Tutthill and Stephen A. Douglas, Jr., at Lippin's hall next Monday night. It will pay you.

—The cemetery road has been fixed up in good shape by Street Commissioner Croft, and the graveyards unobscured by mud, and other long standing causes of complaint remedied.

—The United States Express Company has decided to commence business between here and Deloit, as soon as the Milwaukee & St. Paul's new branch is in regular running order.

—C. T. Wilcox has commenced suit against Pastor Master Hemming for the value of his horses, impounded and sold for charity. Wilcox claims $800 as the value of the horses, and $85 damages.

—A. H. Baxter, Esq., has been called upon to give a political address at a Republican mass meeting in Harvard next Thursday night. He will have a rising audience. He has a rising audience.

—The Republican headquarters over the old post office are open evenings, and to-night, and from now on till after election there will be various newspapers and other reading matter on hand for free perusal. Drop in.

—L. R. Treat's boot and shoe business seems to be booming. The store looks lively, the stock seems in good shape, and everything is moving on prosperously. It's a good place to buy feet coverings and folks are fast finding it out.

—The announcement, in last evening's Gazette, of the death of Mrs. Otis H. Brand, is confirmed by a message from there. The remains will probably pass through Africa to Deloit today, and will probably be taken for interment to Racine, where the family of the deceased formerly lived.

—Some of the citizens who accompanied the Guards on their trip to Atlanta did not return through the week, but have started out to see some of the old battle fields and to visit Mammoth cave, and other places of interest, and expect to arrive home before the Guards. Some of them may be here by tomorrow.

—If any of our readers find marks of red upon their letters and papers received from the post office today, they must not conclude that Republican postmasters have been doing up their packages in the bloody shirt. An out-riding Milwaukee dog house seat through the mail to a Goodhead a package of red paint, which burst by the bag, and became a good many letters and papers with the bloody color. The package will be sent to headquarters for action as the post office regulations are against sending such merchandise by mail.

—There is a promised treat of Republican oratory next Monday night at Lippin's hall. Col. R. S. Tutthill, of Chicago, who is to well know here (he needs no introduction, is one of the speakers announced. He has made some of the liveliest, most logical, and eloquent addresses yet delivered in this campaign. All who heard him at the time of the great Zach Chandler meeting here, know that he is no ordinary speaker, and will be glad of the opportunity of hearing him again. The other speaker is Stephen A. Douglas, Jr., whose name alone is enough to draw a crowd, and he is fully able to entertain them. He will give a speech worthy of a wide hearing, and everybody should turn out to hear these two gentlemen.

How and when lovely women show by outward sign.

The Death dart wielded by the hand benign;

How glad when death relenting, shoots the dart;

And when Spring Blossom's used, at once depart.

Sold by A. J. Roberts, and Croft & Sherer.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY FLETCHER & EVERTON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 6 o'clock last evening stood at 43 degrees above; at 1 o'clock a. m. to-day at 33 degrees above; at 7 o'clock a. m. at 33 degrees above, and at 1 o'clock p. m. at 42 degrees above. Cloudy.

THE GUARDS.

The programme announced for the Guards and other military visitors at Atlanta, was followed out yesterday. Among the speakers who are heralded over the wires as having made able responses to sentiments offered at the reunion yesterday, are Colonel Britton and Captain Smith.

IS HE A HORSE-THIEF?

John E. Duffy is the name given by the man arrested yesterday on suspicion of having stolen the mare and buggy in his possession, and which he was offering for sale. He tells very contradictory stories about himself, and where he came from, and claims that he bought the rig of a man named Keating about thirty or forty miles northwest of Sioux City, but told so many different stories even about this that on being arraigned in the Police Court this morning Justice Nolan decided to hold him until a week from next Monday in order to give Marshal Hogan an opportunity to investigate the matter, and find the owner of the rig. Duffy didn't relish the idea of being kept here, but there seemed no help for it, and so he went.

DEATH OF EDWARD HIELD.

Last evening Mr. George Hield received a telegram from Captain Edward Hield, at Bernalillo, New Mexico, stating: "Your brother died very unexpectedly this morning. The doctor says heart disease. Shall I send body by express?" This crushing, sudden news was the first tidings received that Mr. Hield was in aught but usual good health, and as may well be imagined, it was a terrible blow to the family and relatives. Mr. Hield went with others to New Mexico to enter the employ of Captain Hield in his work of irrigating the mines, and has been in his usual good health, and enjoying the climate and work well. He was of large frame, of robust constitution, and had no prominent signs of heart disease, or other serious ailment.

The reply to the sad telegram received was to the effect that the remains should be forwarded here, and they will probably arrive by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, and will be buried here.

Mr. Hield was one of Janesville's early settlers, having come here about thirty-five years ago. He has led a life of industry and while he has not sought positions bringing him into public notice, yet he was known and respected by all, and his sudden death will call forth an expression of sorrow and sympathy. He leaves a wife and three children, two sons and a daughter.

PERSONAL.

—Miss Kittie Farnsworth has returned from a five weeks' visit among friends in Iowa.

—Charles Eaton, of Winona, Minn., was in the city yesterday, bound eastward, and was accompanied as far as Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Duffman, who will remain there for a few days only.

—J. A. Webb returned from the East yesterday afternoon. He was in New York at the time of the great Republican parade there. He says that he was astonished to see the large numbers of wealthy and prominent business men who joined in the parade, and the number of business men known to him to be Democrats, who openly avowed that they will vote for Garfield. He comes back enthusiastic and confident.

THE MACK TRIAL.

To the Editor:

On reading the communication of H. S. Conger, in your Saturday's issue, my indignation was excited by the title "The Mack Trial," knowing that it is the normal condition was one of irritation and finding.

A subsequent reading has induced me to answer, as it was manifestly written with an intent to charge me with a breach of confidence, if not with falsehood—a charge as unjust as it is false.

The banner article I am in no way responsible for, and it was perhaps as much a surprise to me as to Judge Conger.

That I received the letter published in the Banner, and that I showed it to the court is true, but the concluding part of the article, and to which Mr. Conger takes exception is not true, as will be seen on reading the letter he "promised to grant Mrs. Mack a new trial should the jury bring in a verdict of guilty." Upon so long this statement in the Banner Mr. Fethers and myself voluntarily caused to be published therein, the following:

JANEVILLE, Oct. 19, 1893.

EDITOR OF BANNER: You are in error, in stating in your issue of last week that the Court granted a new trial in the case of the communication of H. S. Conger, by reason of the letter to me from you, which was published in the Banner. I am sorry to find that you have done so, as it is a gross misstatement of the facts. —must have known—when he prepared his communication, as he had read the original in the Banner. Knowing this, why did he quote from the Recorder rather than from the Banner? Was it done in a spirit of unfairness? Did he do it to mislead and deceive? Was it a strained effort to make a point against Mr. Fethers and myself? It looks as though done wilfully and maliciously. But whatever the cause and whatever the motive, it is for him to explain, and the public to judge. I am sorry there is occasion for troubling you and your readers with this, but self-respect demands it.
